At work Petr demonstrates a unique combination of real interest, business thinking and a psychological perspective. After working in a large international company, he listened to his heart and dived straight into training as a clinical psychologist. Soon after, his entrepreneurship guided him into forming his own consulting and training company, Mindweb Consulting, with five people and it fascinated him that much that once he became licensed, he decided to focus in full on the development of people. Petr is the soul of humancraft and he prefers working on big projects with an impact on results and with the biggest involvement of the client. In his role as co-owner of the company he is responsible for product strategy, development, and the joint creation and launch of our own and licensed products. His responsibilities also include building partnership alliances across sectors both in Czechia and abroad.
